Feeding Your Pets Healthy!!!

Common sense would say that if we ate better quality foods it would lead to a healthier and longer life. Well the same is true for our pets. Don't be fooled by television commercials, and magazine ads; most commercially available pet foods contain cheap fillers, dangerous preservatives, artificial colors and flavors, as well as meat by-products. The benefits of an all natural, organic, or raw diet are numerous and include the following...

- Longer Lifespan – Because natural and organic options can help manage your pet's weight, provide additional nutrients and boost your pet's immune system, your cherished friend can expect a significantly longer lifespan when eating all-natural pet food.
- Fewer Allergens – Animals eat a variety of processed food proteins, by-products, grain fillers, colorings, and preservatives when fed commercial-grade pet foods. Proteins may be combined or changed into substances recognized by the immune system as foreign invaders to be attacked. The resulting inflammation may target the GI tract or other organ systems but, in dogs and cats, it is the skin that most often suffers. These allergies can suddenly develop even if you have been feeding the same food for years. The immune system must develop enough antibodies to trigger an allergic reaction and this requires multiple exposures to the food in question which typically take months or years. With an all-natural pet food, you don't have to worry about questionable, by-products, fillers, or artificial substances.

“A Well balanced diet improves overall health inside and out!”

- Lower Weight – Whether your pet is currently overweight or you're simply concerned about preventive weight management, an all-natural diet can help your pet stay fit. Healthy ingredients replace filler starches that are used in most commercially available brands. Animals eat more proteins and nutrients, which help them stay full and eat less while getting more from their food intake with each meal. Weight management can improve your pet's heart health and overall quality of life.
- More Energy – Along with maintaining an energy-boosting level of fitness due to managed weight, the nutrients found in all-natural and organic pet foods can actually increase your animal's desire and ability to stay alert and active.

Feeding Your Pets Healthy!!!

- Healthier Skin – Because all-natural, and organic pet foods contain no chemicals or artificial substances, your animal is less likely to suffer from skin irritations or dryness. A well-balanced diet improves overall health, inside and out.
- More Attractive Coat – Along with improved skin care, a healthier diet can add to the luster and thickness of your pet's coat. Nutrients and vitamins contained in better quality foods make fur healthier and shinier. Not only are there simply more nutrients for your pet per serving, but your pet is more likely to absorb and retain these nutrients in their systems than with processed options.

In addition to the benefits described above when feeding better quality dry and canned pet foods additional benefits can be obtained from a raw diet. Dogs and cats are carnivores and nature has intended for them to eat small animals like rabbits and squirrels. When a carnivore eats an animal like a rabbit they digest some meat, bone, organs and the green vegetation in the prey's digestive tract. A raw diet replicates nature's perfect meal.

A raw diet for healthy animals is likely to help them avoid illnesses that are now becoming common in our pets. Switching a sick pet to a raw diet often produces an improvement in their condition and quality of life.

Additional benefits of a raw diet include...

- Cleaner teeth, fresh breath, and reduced or eliminated need for veterinary dental work
- More consistent, smaller, less offensive smelling stools
- Reduction of allergy symptoms
- Increased mobility in older animals
- Increased energy, and stamina

Summertime at Lincoln Center is filled with so many performing arts festivals, they actually outnumber the months! In June, July, and August, four beloved series dedicated to music, dance, theater, and more return to our inviting plazas and prestigious halls—and that's not even counting our ongoing campus programming, like the free events taking place weekly at the David Rubenstein Atrium. With the sun shining down on our scenic campus, things really do start to heat up onstage; so, to help you make the most of your summer, we've rounded up a few of the seasonal highlights coming to Lincoln Center.

Midsummer Night Swing (June 27–July 15)

Lincoln Center's social dance party under the stars returns this month with three weeks of performances in Damrosch Park. An incredible roster of local talent is rounded out with artists from around the globe who bring diverse musical genres and the dance styles that complement them. Highlights include an opening night concert with the Legendary Count Basie Orchestra (June 27), an appearance by Cuba's Issac Delgado Orchestra (July 5), and the return of the Loser's Lounge (June 29)—plus a spectacular evening with David Ostwald's Louis Armstrong Eternity Band (July 4). Don't worry if you don't know the moves; evenings begin with a short dance lesson! The season closes on a high note with the always-popular Harlem Renaissance Orchestra (July 15), which sells out fast—so be sure to grab tickets soon.

Lincoln Center Festival (July 10–30)

Since 1967, Lincoln Center Festival has been presenting performing arts from outside the Western canon, as well as pieces that deepen our relationship with more traditional works. This year's lineup is dedicated to the theme of crossing borders, both figuratively and literally. It includes three theatrical pieces that create a timely and touching dialogue about the Middle East: Amos Gitai's *Yitzhak Rabin: Chronicle of an Assassination (featuring videography, music, and recitation, July 19); Hanan Snir's *To the End of the Land (an Israeli family drama based on David Grossman's best-selling novel, July 24–27); and Mohammad Al Attar's *While I Was Waiting (which uses real interviews to inform a fictional tale about modern life in Syria, July 19–22). What will undoubtedly be the great treasure of this season is George Balanchine's *Jewels, celebrating its 50th anniversary with an international tribute featuring the Bolshoi Ballet, New York City Ballet, and Paris Opera Ballet sharing the stage in a historic presentation of this masterwork (July 20–23). The Bolshoi will also present Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew, with choreography by Jean-Christophe Maillot (July 26–30).

Mostly Mozart Festival (July 25–August 20)

Mostly Mozart this summer highlights the profound impact left by the short life of Franz Schubert, presenting his "Great" Symphony (August 4–5) and The Dark Mirror: Zender's Winterreise (August 12–13), an enthralling theatrical production by Netia Jones, starring tenor Ian Bostridge, with orchestrations by Hans Zender. Renée and Robert Belfer Music Director Louis Langrée returns to the podium for his 15th season, beginning with The Singing Heart* (July 25–26), an exuberant evening of symphony and song performed by the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra. Guest artists throughout the festival include Jeremy Denk (July 28–29), Joshua Bell, and Steven Isserlis (August 8–9); ensembles include Les Arts Florissants (July 27), the Danish String Quartet (August 10), and Sō Percussion with the New York premiere of David Lang's man made (August 1–2). It concludes with the return of the Budapest Festival Orchestra's provocative staged concert of Don Giovanni* (August 17, 19, 20), conducted and directed by Iván Fischer.

Lincoln Center Out of Doors (July 26–August 13)

If you really needed another excuse to visit our 16-acre campus on a beautiful summer day, there's nothing more enticing than three weeks of entirely free concerts during Lincoln Center Out of Doors. This year's most anticipated moments include our opening-day with NPR Music's *Turning the Tables Live, paying respect to the women who paved the way for today's record-shattering female artists. Miguel Atwood-Ferguson's *Suite for Ma Dukes draws on hip-hop producer J Dilla as an inspiration (August 4), complemented by Momma's Hip Hop Kitchen on July 30. Another feature is the long-awaited return of the National Double Dutch Competition, which took place over 30 years ago on the Josie Robertson Plaza. This summer, two days are dedicated to the movement-based art form, including a symposium and the screening of Pick Up Your Feet: The Double Dutch Show, during Family Weekend (July 29–30).
